

Tara Dwyer, a career-long early educator, is a Senior Program Manager at ECEPTS. She began her career as a toddler teacher, but over the years has held various roles in the ECE Professional Development System. During five years at the Pennsylvania Office of Child Development and Early Learning, Tara led the design and implementation of the mentor component of the first degree-based ECE Registered Apprenticeship in the country. She also worked at the state policy level to build cross-sector capacity and support for equitable access to ECE apprenticeship pathways. Tara has extensive experience with systems change efforts and infusing a human-centered approach into program design and development. She has an M.Ed. in Early Childhood Education from Arcadia University and a bachelor's degree in Psychology from Temple University.
